Nixon Submits His Program To Finance 2 Radios Abroad

By Benjamin Welles

—President Nixon has asked Congress to set up a tax-exempt nonprofit corporation to finance and supervise Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty.

The administration's draft proposal, which the Senate Foreign Relations Committee is scheduled to discuss tomorrow, marks a con-cession to congressional criticism of secret financing of the two stations by the Central Intelligence Agency since their creation in the early 1950s.

Instead, Congress would appropriate about $40 million annually for the proposed corpora-

President's Role

The directors would be named by the President of the United States with the advice and consent of the Senate. Initially, tha council would be barred from channeling funds received from Congress into any activities except those of the two radio stations. Eventually, however, congressional sources say, funds and authority might be expanded by Congress to include educational and cultural exchanges.

Sen. Clifford P. Case, R., N.J., said today that he was "pleased . . . that the Nixon administration has accepted my proposal for open government funding of Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty."

The following day he and Rep. Ogden R. Reid, R., N.Y., introduced legislation calling for direct congressional appropriations to finance the two stations.

The CIA's control over, and financing of, Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty, has always been officially denied. But it has been an open secret in Europe for two decades and bas elicited repeated protests from East European governments. Radio Liberty, which broadcasts into the Soviet Union, and Radio Free Europe, which broadcasts into the other East European countries excepting Yugoslavia, have offices in New York. Their dayto-day direction, however, is exercised in Munich where both stations have extensive broadcasting facilities. The stations employ large numbers of analysts, writers and broadcasters of Russian or East European ethnic origin and transmit several hours of daily news and analyses often critical of Communist officials and their policies. By contrast, the Voice of America, as the government's "official" broadcasting arm, avoids critical comment

The University of Texas provided the other funds to build the library and school. Now the library will be administered by the National Archives and the upkeep paid for by taxpayers, as is the case at other presidential libraries.

The vast turnout to honor the Johnsons included, besides President and Mrs. Nixon and David and Julie Eisenhower, Vice-President and Mrs. Agnew, Democratic . Sens. . Hubert. H. Humphrey, who flew here on the Vice-President's plane, and Ed-mund S. Muskle, most of the old Johnson cabinet and White House staff, Secretary of State and Mrs. William P. Rogers, Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John Connally and scores of mempers of Congress.

The one light moment came vien President Nixon made a slip, saying, "Ju minutes ago, as President Johnson was throwing me through the library. The crowd roared. The President finally was able to correct himself and substitute

"showing" for "throwing."
"I'm coming back later when I have more time," he said. While touring the library, the President and Mrs. Nixon preecited on loan to the library a portrait of President Andrew Jackson painted by Thomas Sully

Resor Says U.S. Isolationi Might Block European Ur

WASHINGTON, May 25 (UPI). -Retiring Army Secretary Stan-ley R. Resor said today that if American involvement in Vietnam led to isolationism and unilateral troop withdrawals from Surope, then the U.S. role in Vietnam was "unwise."

Mr. Resor, who submitted his resignation Friday after serving as the top civilian in the U.S. Army since the Vietnam war buildup began in 1965, said Americans must learn to distinguish between their roles in Western Europe and in Asia. The American interests are primarily in Europe, he declared.

If the United States were to

Mr. Resor said that the current American force levels in Europe "buy time for Western Europe to develop those policies and institutions which you see grow-ing right before your eyes." He added, however, that if Vietnam "were to result in a U.S. return to isolationism, if this were to result in significant unilateral reduction of (U.S.) forces in Europe . . . then surely it (Vietnam) would have been an unwise thing to do."

Mr. Resor warned that one of the results of drestic reduction of American forces in Europe would be that Germany would Russians "and undermine the possibilities (of European union) which look so promising."

Mr. Resor, who will remain as Army secretary while a suc-cessor is sought, also voiced doubts about the administration's plans for an all-volunteer Army unless Congress concentrates on bonus pay for combat units instead of across-the-board pay rises for all the military. On Vietnam, Mr. Resor said where Mr. Murphy held a news conference yesterday, to patrol beats across the city, where policemen wore black patches over their shields, came expressions of bitterness over the murders and the series of five armed attacks on city policemen in the last four days.

As authorities appealed for further information from the public, Mr. Murphy said the police had found six witnesses to the slaving of patrolmen Waverly M. Jones, 33, and Joseph A. Piagen-tini, 28.

Shot in Back

They were shot in the back at 10:30 p.m. as they emerged from a routine call at a housing de-velopment on Harlem River Drive. Patrolman Jones, a black man, was shot twice, once in the head, and Patrolman Piagentini who was white, was shot eight times, all with A5 caliber bullets. The suspects in the shooting were described as two black men,

With the aid of the witnesses, the police made a composite sketch of the first suspect. These were distributed to policemen across the city, who were joined in the investigation by hundreds of off-duty policemen volunteering their services.

Promising confidentiality, the police urged anyone with information about the murders to call at two special numbers. All leads, however seemingly remote, were being checked.

Recent Attacks

Contending that the recent series of attacks on policemen were developing into a "war" between policemen and "revolu-tionaries," Edward J. Klernan, president of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, yesterday angrily repeated his call for a shotgun for every policeman. He also urged district attorneys to impanel grand juries to investigate revolutionary groups and demanded that courts impose stiffer sentences.

Mr. Murphy appeared to be acting to counter the PBA official's hard-line attitude yesterday in announcing the assignment of extra men to accompany patrolmen responding to calls for Mayor John V. Lindsay attendthe news conference after 40-minute briefing by the commissioner and his top sides, but made no statement.

Mr. Murphy asserted that there was no evidence at present to connect the slayings of the two patrolmen Friday night with the shooting of two other officers on Wednesday night.

Mr. Murphy declined to ment on letters received Friday night by The New York Times and radio station. WLIB in Harthat said the Wednesday shootings had been carried out by "oppressed third-world peo-ples," and that more assaults on policemen could be expected. Accompanying the letters in packages delivered by blacks who fied were the license plates from a car being sought by the police in connection with the shootings.

Gun attacks on policemen have shown a sharp rise here this year, with an average of three policemen shot every two weeks thus far. Last year's shootings averaged less than one a week. In addition to seven policemen killed so far—as many as all of last vear-Police Department statistics reported 30 members of the force injured by gun shots through last Wednesday. For all of last year, 45 men were wounded by gunfire.

ANKARA, May 23 (AP) .- The Turkish government has raised the price it pays farmers for raw oplum, a move designed to keep opium from being sidetrack-ed into the black market.

Prices paid depending on the quality were raised from 80-110 Turkish lires ($5.30-7.30) to 135-185 Turkish liras ($9-12.30) per kilogram, the state Soil Products Office announced.

Over 700 Americans are now teaching or conducting research here, more than double the figure ten years ago. At the University of Cambridge, 400 Americans are now teaching or in research. Two years ago there were 143.

American teachers eite numerous reasons for moving to Britain for one year or longer. The scarce number of jobs available on U.S. campuses, student unrest that hampers teaching and research and the "publish or perish" mood in many college departments.

However, there are also com-plaints about conditions in this country, among them low pay and living in relatively isolated communities without such amenities as central heating.

'Most Difficult Season in 20 Years'

Fewer Jobs for '71 College Grads By Wayne King the same percentage as graduates

NEW YORK, May 23 (NYT). -The job outlook for college graduates, which was had last year, is even worse today.

College and university placement officers, employment commissions and government agencles in every part of the country paint the same bleak picture; fewer jobs few options for graduates, greater competition. At the same time, for those lucky enough to find a job, salaries remain high, although the up-ward spiral of past years has slowed or stopped in most cases. Some industry recruiters who have visited the same campuses for years are not even paying courtesy calls this year. When the recruiters do show up, as they did at Pitteburgh's Carnegie-Mellon University recently, they are apt to find hope-ful seniors swaddled in blankets and camping in the hallways, there since the night before in order to be first in line.

The skilled graduate who three or four years ago could have had his pick of job offers at good starting salaries may now have to pump gas or drive a taxi," said a California university official. But even that option is limited. The summer job picture is also the worst in years.

Among 35 student applicants for four summer gardening jobs listed at the University of California at San Diego, for example, were six PhD candidates. Other colleges report similar problems.

Herdest bit among those seek ing permanent jobs, according to a survey conducted by the College Placement Council, a private nonprofit organization, are gradnates in engineering, the sciences, mathematics and other technical disciplines. Warren E. Kaufman, editor of the council's publications; said the survey indicated that "last year [the job outlook] was much tougher than the previous year, and this year is regarded as the most difficult recruiting season in 20 years-or longer."

The council serves some 2,100 employers and 1,300 colleges in the United States and Canada. In its survey of employers, Mr. Kaufman said, the council found that companies expected to hire 23 percent fewer new employees this year than last. In broad categories, the council found that business graduates could be expected to be affected least-although a drop of 18 percent from last year's hiring level was projected. Engineering could expect 27 percent fewer job offers,

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP).-A Texas defense firm told Congress Friday of its invention to detect and photograph

It's called Orbis II and, to hear the industry people talk, it will drive radar out of business as a way of scaring American speeders into slowing down. The driver knows his picture has been taken because a

In Arlington, Texas, the police department, in an experiment with the device, has sent out more warnings than tickets to people photographed in the act of speeding. The photographs are kept on computerized files until, or if, a case is to be pursued beyond the warning.

"I must say some persons get anxious about that possi-bility of photos being mailed to them," Arlington Mayor Tom Vandergriff said.

At least one congressman had some qualms. "Does anybody feel that in doing this we're, if not in 1984, at least in 1983?" Rep. Patrick Caffery, D., La., asked, referring to the specter of state spying in George Orwell's

French Anti-Pope's Disciples Toss Leaflets at St. Peter's

VATICAN CITY, May 23 (UPI). -Disciples of a Frenchman who calls himself Pope Clement XV flung thousands of leaflets into a crowd listening to Pope Paul VI in St. Peter's Square today. But their sudden action seconds after the Pontiff appeared at the window of his apartment failed to disrupt his regular Sunday blessing of tourists and pilgrims. It was the biggest demonstration so far staged by the followers of Michel Collin, a defrocked Roman Catholic priest who says that he is the real Pope. A strong wind whirled the leastlets high into the air in front of St. Peter's Basilica. They were in full view of the Pope but be made no reference to the incident. Plainclothes policemen mingling in the crowd grabbed some of the demonstrators, including one man who shouted "Fascist" when the Police said that about a dezen persons were briefly detained for Clement's supporters staged the first demonstration in memory inside the Vatican on when they disrupted a papal audience for several seconds before being hustled out by Swiss Guards.

Today, they were scattered among about 25,000 persons gathered for the Pope's blessing. Pope Clement himself was apparently not among the demonstrators. He was deported in February, 1969, as an "undesirable" person after he arrived to set up a rival Vatican in a Milan apartment accompanied by eight "cardinals" and two "Swiss Guards." He now main-tains his "Holy See" in a building near Dijon, France. Some of the leaflets called on the Pope to renounce his "heresy" and reveal the "third secret of Patima"-an obsession with the followers of the antipope and many others. This refers to a secret that some Roman Catholics believe was delivered to three Portuguese children by the Virgin Mary in 1917 and later given to the Roman Pontiffs for safekeeping.

Adonis, 69, was placed in Milan's San Vittore Jail on a "preventive custody" warrant signed by the local court. Police Chief Ferruccio Allitto had asked for the warrant pending a court decision on another request that Adonis be exiled to some small Italian village.

The exile procedure is a common practice in Italy against Masis and other underworld figures. Last week, 17 reputed Mana chieftains were deported to the island of Linosa in the Mediterranean.

Police did not say immediately why they were acting against Adonis, who was taken from his elegant, seventh-floor apartment in downtown Milan where he

The Upheaval in Egypt And a Chance for the U.S.

By Raymond H. Anderson CAIRO UNYT .- The hour of revolution has struck!"

Those ominous words of an Egyptian patriotic song went oot over the Cairo radio shortly after 11 p.m. Thursday, May 13, following a startling news announce-ment that five of President Anwar Sedat's cabinet ministers had abruptly resigned. The drama of political showdown was confronting Mr. Sadat, the head of an uneasy collective leadership of strong men who had inherited power in Egypt following Gamal Abdel Nasser's death last Sept. 28.

Mr. Sadat, himself a master conspirator in the years before the overthrow of King Farouk in 1952, was listening to the broadcast. He understood instantly what was afoot—an intrigue to challenge his leadership.

Only 11 days earlier, he had dismissed one of the strong men, the enigmatic Aly Sabry, the friend of Moscow who had become one of two vice-presidents in the post-Nasser leadership. In the hours before the showdown, Mr. Sagat ordered the "resignation" of another of the strong men, Charaoui Gomaa, a deputy premier and the minister of interior who had control over the security police and a nationwide network of informers, surveillance agents, telephone-tapping gear and other listening devices.

The ouster of Mr. Gomaa triggered the other resignations as a show of solidarity. Many details of the confrontation are still shadowy, but several conclusions

Mr. Sadat was more agile, shrewd and determined in the showdown than his challengers and, decisively, he had the support of public opinion and the loyalty of military commanders except for the unpopular Lt. Gen. Mohammed Fawzi, the minister

• Mr. Sadat's triumph over his leadership rivals has left him clearly the master of Egypt's immediate destiny. And, despite the power be seems to have consolidated in his person, that destiny, he rowed to the National Assembly, is to be put in the hands of the people through free elections.

• The rout of a leftist faction in the Arab Socialist Union is a setback to the Soviet Union's ideological ambitions in the Middle East. But economic, military and diplomatic cooperation seem unlikely to be seriously affected.

 An unexpected opportunity has arisen for the United States to improve its relations with Egypt and at the same time bolster Mr. Sadat, bot only by walking across hot coals to put pressure on Israel to quit Arab

The political crisis struck Egypt like a whirlwind, a swift and menacing but short-lived storm: At 10:58 p.m. on May 13, a message arrived at Mr. Sadat's

It contained the resignations of Gen. Fawzi: Mohammed Fayek. the minister of information; Sami Sharaf, minister of state for presidential affairs, and two lesser

"The message said that more resignations would be coming and that they would be broadcast at 11 o'clock," Mr. Sadat declared the next night in an emotional broadcast to the Egyptian people. Mr. Fayek, a former intelligence officer, was at the broadcasting center to ensure that his subordinates read the resignation announcement over the scheduled news program. The Cairo radio then broadcast the crowd-stirring phrase "The hour of revolution has struck!" and patriotic songs to whip up fervor among listeners.

"The hour of revolution" had indeed struck, but not in the seuse intended by Mr. Sadat's foes in the leadership.

Within a few hours the major foes were under house arrest and later were moved to prisons. Before 24 hours had passed, Mr. Sadat was in supreme coutrol of Egypt, with a new cabinet made up of loyal supporters and competent specialists, mainly pro-

ASU Crippled

The vaunted Arab Socialist Union, the mass political organization and source of most opposition to Mr. Sadat, had been crippled with the resignations and aten arrests of three leftist members of the ruling eight-member Bigher Executiva Committee: Abdel Mohsen Abdul Nur, secretary-general, Dr. Iabid Shukair and Diaddin Daoud.

A secret Communist-oriented group in the Arab Socialist Union was being broken up and its members arrested.

Mr. Sadat won support from Egyptians of all classes by arousing their wrath against policestate restraints and fear, a legacy from the years of revolutionary struggle and conspiracy since

In one area of vital importance a settlement of the long conflict with Israel, Mr. Sadat'e enhanced authority is of decisive benefit. He can make and enforce decisions on terms that would have broken apart before under challenge by his "collec-tive leadership" colleagues.

This is of major concern to the United States, eager for a settlement but apprehensive in the past whether Egypt would or could shide by settlement commitments.

The United States has been gravely troubled by the Russian military presence in Egypt, and appears ready to move more vigorously to get the Israelis away from the Suez Canal, and later out of all the Sinai Peninsula, in exchange for assurances that the tussian combat personnel would leave Egypt. Mr. Sadat was reported to have given such assurances to Secretary of State William P. Rogers during his visit to Cairo early this month.

Some days after the death of Nasser, the eight-member Higher Executive Committee of the Arab Union unanimously Socialist selected Mr. Sadat to succee Nasser as president, and the eventual steps of endorsement and referendum were mere formalities.

But Mr. Sadat was chosen as compromise figure, who was expected to be attentive to the will of the core of leaders. The first three months of the Egyptian collective leadership west smoothly enough, with major attention devoted to correcting internal problems, as best as possible with limited funds, and the distractions of finding reasons to extend the Suez Canal cease-fire beyond its Nov. 5 expiration.

A gathering storm against Mr. Sadat gained momentum March, following his decision to open a "friendship offensive" elicit U.S. support for achieving a political settlement with Is-

About this time, it appears that Mr. Sabry and his backers decided that it would be necessary either to curb Mr. Sadat's authority or to overthrow him.

They were given an opportunity when Mr. Sadat, for military reasons, agreed at a meeting in Benghazi, Libya, on April 17 to link Egypt with Syria and Libya in a federation. The Egyptian people have been cool to thoughts of Arab union since their bitter experience with Syria more than a decade ago,

Mr. Sabry decided to use the against Mr. Sadat. He assailed the plan at a meeting of the Higher Executive Committee of the Arab Socialist Union and achieved a five-to-three vote against Mr. Sadat.

Victory seemed assured. As Mr. Sadat related to the Egyptian people in his broadcast. he insisted upon taking the issue to the 150-member Central Committee for discussion and a

An uproar resulted at the meeting, on April 25. Mr. Sadat, in defense, disclosed that the Egyptians had military air bases in Syria and needed some form of unity agreement to ensure an eastern front against Israel.

The disorder and shouting continued against Mr. Sadat, and it appeared that he was on his way to the precipice. A subconimittee was formed to study the federation statutes, and the debate was put off.

Mr. Sabry's objective, Egyptians report, was to humiliate Mr. Sadat by forcing him to so back to the Syrian and Libyan leaders and inform them that the federation was canceled. At the same time, they say, be had in mind the possibility of being able to develop the issue into a crisis and extract a resignation by Mr. Sadat as president.

The president was two jumps shead of Mr. Sabry and his fellow plotters, however. The night after the Central Committee liesco, Mr. Sadat summoned the top military commanders to his home, informed them of the chal-lenge and asked: "Where do you

The chicf of staff, Lt. Gen. Mohammed Sadek, spoke out: "I stand with you, the supreme commander." Other officers voiced their support, but Gen. Fawzi, the war minister, was silent.

The conspirators, aware of a secret decree by Mr. Sadat for harsh emergency measures if the Central Committee once again erupted against him, spread the word around. Mr. Sabry sought to apologize to Mr. Sadat, and on April 29, to Mr. Sadat's surprise, the Central Committee voted unanimously in favor of the federation, whose statutes had been weakened to lessen any loss of Egyptian sovereignty.

Two days later, the president went to the industrial suburb of Helwan and put the handwriting on the wall with critical remarks about "centers of power" seeking to "dictate their will on the people." The next night he dismissed Mr. Sabry, The subsequent events leading

Two Decades Show Pronounced Changes, a New I

The outhor, on assistant mouaging editor of The New York Times, was a reporter in mainland China from 1946 to 1949. He returned there last week for a three-week visit.

By Seymour Topping CANTON (NYT),-In 1948, a

In a boisterous mood, one American flung a handful of nearly worthless Chinese Nationalist currency into the air in The other watched the sweating. panting riksha men scramble in dust for the bills and reflected on this humiliation brought on by war, government corruption and inflation.

On returning to this teeming southern metropolis after two decades, one finds the face of society transformed. A new Canton man has emerged. His old verve and individuality seem to have yielded to passivity, but he also obviously lives better and carries himself with restored dignity.

Old brawling Canton, with its raucous downtown neon lights, is gone. Also gone are the emaciated beggars who stood outside restaurants with outstretched palms and looked in at banquet tables where most of the refulgent dishes were left haif con-sumed by the rich. Forgotten are the brothels where roundfaced girls with flashing eyes and chattering, birdlike voices insisted to rough foreign seamen on the civility of sipping tea ceremonimisly before sex was dispensed.

Crowded Store

. In the poorly lighted three story Nanfang Department Store, the largest in Cantoo, crowds surged about counters buying such household necessities as thermos jugs, soap, preserves and bolts of plain cloth.

The average worker in Canton is said to carn 60 to 70 yuan ($25 to $30) a month At Nanfang, a customer was paying seven yuan for a large aluminum cooking pot 227 yuan for a table electric fan 21 yuan for a medium - sized plastic suitcase and 51 year for a cheap-looking portable transistor radio.

A woman's cotton blouse was seiling for 4.85 yuan, with matching slacks for 4.25 year.

While store prices are high Cantonese can afford some such purchases because of their low rents. An unmarried worker can bunk in a factory-dormitory for less than one youn a month. His food costs 15 youn more. A family can get living quarters, including a bedroom and kitchen facilities, for three or four yuan.

For Foreigners

Adjoining Naniang Department Store is a Friendship Shop for foreigners, where officials of the Polish and North Vietnamese Consulates in Canton as well as seamen and visiting businessmen shop. Here there is a better se-lection of goods, including a sewing machine made in Canton, fine bicycles and brocade cloth, Payment is in yuan purchased with foreign currency.

Housing developments seem limited but driving down the embankment of the Pearl River, which divides Canton, some new construction can be seen, notably the 27-story Canton Hotel, the largest building in the city, which towers over the trade-fair complex. On the south side of the river, new housing has been constructed for fishermen and their families, who once lived in sampans by the quartide.

It is wrong to say to the President's announcement was the fact that it came just a week after another new and mingly epochal development the swift and positive response by the United States to a new Soviet proposal for a mutual reduction in East-West force levels in

With the United States and the Soviet Union heavily engaged in diplomatic efforts to defuse the Middle Eastern crisis—efforts personally led by Secretary of State William P. Rogers—the immediate reaction of diplomats was to ask whether a broad effort was under way between the two superpowers to bring into resor lation some of the critical issues which divide them.

No one in Washington or elsewhere was offering yes or no answers. But two factors seemed self-evident. Nothing had actu-ally been settled by the Soviet-American exchange on SALT. Nor were East and West any closer to agreeing to cut down their military establishments in Europe.

Atmosphere Changes

However, the atmosphere between the two superpowers had been radically altered. The red lights on SALT and on talks between NATO and the Warsaw Pact had been changed to amber. Possibly ever to green.

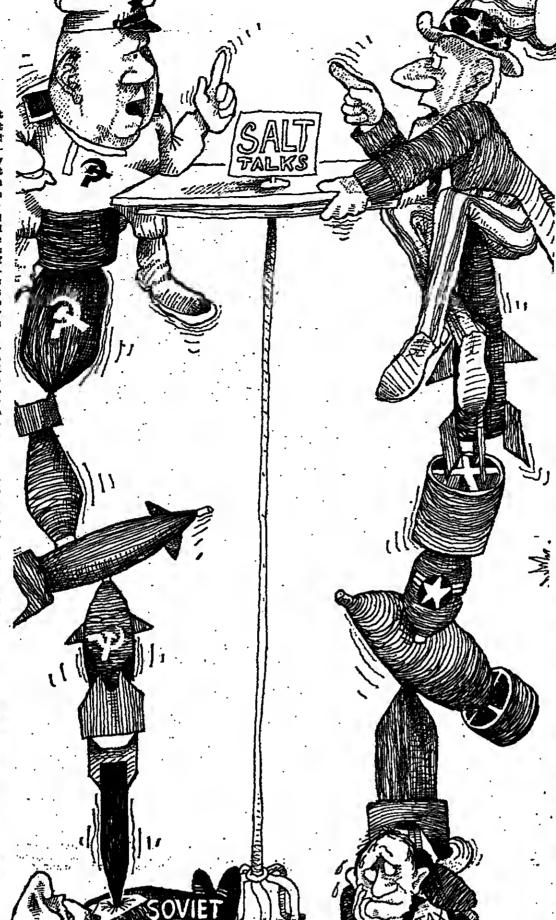

This was no small gain. As one UN diplomat suggested: "You can measure the achievement by imagining what kind of atmosphere the opposite announcements would have created—if Mr. Nixon had announced a breakdown at SALT or denounced Mr. Brezhnev's suggestion for new European troops talks."

The announcement simultaneously made by Mr. Nixon and Moscow radio established an agreement in principle under which the two powers will move forward in an effort to achieve agreement on control of nuclear weaponry. First, they will seek to agree on an anti-ballistic mis-sile (ABM) limitation and "together with cancinding an agreement to limit ABMs, they will agree on certain measures with respect to the limitation of of-lensive strategic weapons."

Behind this deliberately general and technical language are hid-den months of hard bargaining and a private correspondence between Mr. Nixon and Moscow, presumably carried on by Pre-mier Alexei N. Kosygin with the collaboration of Mr. Leonid I.

The order of precedence in a major sticking point. The Soviet Union wished to negotiate only on the ABM, The United States wanted most of all an overall limitation on offensive wespons. The procedural agreement split the difference in a way most observers felt gave the at all and those who wish to go Soviet Union a bit of a con-much further.

Mr. Nixon, in dealing with conflicting views of his own advisors, seemed to have come down in

Both Moscow radio and the Soviet Caution

Communist party newspaper, Prayda, seemed deliberately to play down the significance of the SALT agreement. Soviet officials said that they did not wish to arouse public expectations prematurely, stressing the long distance which both countries must travel before accord could be

Mr. Nixon was openly entbu-siastic. Some in Washington felt that he wished to stress his. peace-making posture before a nation which he senses is more than war-weary. Political observers noted that the President had an opportunity to appeal directly to the country's peace sen-timent and sought full advantage. Some sober second thoughts were voiced by Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird and there was an echo of this in a reminder which Mr. Nixon offered of the difficulties that lay ahead after he had met in the White House with his chief SALT negotiator. Gerard C. Smith.

But after all, these hostages had been given to fortune, the impression remained clear that in the area which both the Soviet Union and the United States regard as most critical to world peace and world survival a marked step had been taken away from the brink of nuclear suicide toward nuclear control, if not nuclear reduction

Why such a step at this time? The Russians pointed squarely to their 24th party congress a little le than two months ago and the six-point peace program out-lined March 30 by party secre-tary Breshney. This program in-cluded a call for an end to the Vietnam war, dismantling of the NATO-Warsaw pact organiza-tions in Europe, ban and control of nuclear and other weapons, a five-power noclear conference of the United States, the Soviet Union, China, Britain and France and end of the arms race and dis-mantlement of foreign bases.

Speech at Tiflis

It was to this program that Mr. Brezhnev referred in a speech at Tiflis May 14 in which he touched off the diplomatic peace moves by saying: "All you have to do is to muster resolve to try the proposals that interest you by their taste. Translated into diplomatic language this means: 'Start negotiations.'"

And the Soviet Union was by no means confining its peace offensive to the United States. It took the occasion of Canadian Prime Minister Pierre E. Tradeau's visit to Moscow last week to sign an agreement of friendship, good neighborliness and mutual confidence,

For the first time since President Nixon proclaimed in his mangural address that we would now move from the era of confrontation to the era of negotiation, it seemed that this was indeed the case,

There were those who suggested that perhaps Peking and table-termis diplomacy deserved some credit for the transformation in atmosphere. The reality of China playing a major role on the international scene and the rapidity with which the long iciness in U.S.-Chinese relations was melting under the influence of sports and journalistic visits had not gone unnoticed in Moscow.

Competitive Desire

More than one observer wondered whether Chine's diplomatio success had influenced in Moscow a competitive desire to put its relations with the United Sates into order as a hedge against a least a partial Sino-American détente.

The possibility seemed to be emerging that the world would soon be confronted with genuine three-power relationships in which a move by Washington, Moscow or Peking would automatically produce repercussions in the other two capitals. This raised the prospect that within the foreseeable future the two-power erms talks of the super-powers would have to be transformed

Fos has launched a great anguished debate in Provence. The themes are those now universal in a world that is increasingly concerned with decentralization of power, revenue-sharing, pol-lution and the "quality of life." "People have talked only of Fos's industrialization, as if the aim were to imitate America," someone remarked at a recent forum on Fos in Marseilles. "But I'm afraid that this way, we will fall into the same trap as America, that is, succeed perhaps in in-dustrialization but fail completely in achieving a satisfactory quality of life."

A Rotterdam

Other participants in other forums have evoked the specter of a Parisian uglification of Provence-a fear of the dormitory cities ("rectangular parallelepip eds of raw concrete") and shantytowns of the Paris suburbs, where sports fields, cultural centers, parks and other sources of animation and balance in city life have been ignored. For a long time, the industrialization of Fos was indeed all that south" was launched in the early 1960s, but success did not appear insured until the government decided in late 1969 to back the construction of a steel mill here. The Fos port-industrial zone, which is under the control of the Port Authority of Marseilles, is intended to stimulate the eco-nomic life of the Marseilles area. This has been sluggish since de-colonization and the closing of the Suez Canal .

Transition

To commercial interests in this region, Fos appeared ideal for the opening of a new chapter in the history of Marseilles, which dates its founding to 600 BC, by Phoenician sailors. Fos had vast tracts of unused swampland and the deepest waters of any port ares in Europe, advantageous in the competition for the traffic of the new huge off tankers.

Fos traces its name to the canal (Fossae Merianae) dug by Marius to enable Roman ships to reach Arles without passing through the turbulent waters of the Rhône estuary. In more recent times, its only vocation was leisure activities.

The swamp area drew hunters. in season. During the summer, families packed the town's long beach, where dozens of German World War II bunkers provide some shade. Tourists mounted the hillside to see the old ramparts and church.

Now, much of that is changing rapidly. Part of the beach has been amputated for an oil tanker dock and the rest of it may never be popular again. It appears polluted, wind whipped spray from the surf leaving oil s a constant parade of people in this area worried about, streaks on the wind tion company trucks, in The idea for a "Rotterdam of the passing cars." streaks on the windshields of more, according to port officials, sellies, a city of one million is

By 1975, Fos's traffic is expected to move Marsellies up a rank into second place among Europe's ports, ahead of Antwerp and behind Rotterdam,

A Paradox

Just how much people in the region will benefit from Fos is a question troubling the Provenczux. As a labor union official remarked, the people here are in a "painful paradoxical situation." Unemployment in the region is twice the national average, but the jobless are not qualified for much of the work that will be created, for instance, at the steel mill. Government officials acknowledge that Paris has been slow in setting up technical training programs. The Provencaux are worried that trained Lorraine steelworkers, seeking the sun, if nothing else, will get the jobs at the mill

Home construction is behind schedule. Some of the early workers at Fos are living in trailers. Schools will be a problem eventually, for government officials say no schools will be but up until a certain minimum number of children arrive in an

Pollution already has a head start. Much of it affects the Etang de Berre, a huge sea lake, part of which planners envisage as sites for such leisure activities as boating and picnicking for the new population of the region. Several small rivers flowing into the Etang de Berre are polluted by Marselles's refuse. (Only the steel mill, but not much 5 percent of the waste of Mar-

"Noise pollution" is evident as planes take off from Marseilles's international sirport at Marignane, There is a stench in the air along some parts of the lake from oil refineries that treat a fourth of the crude used in FIRDCE.

Fos's new industries, of course, will cause more pollution. On days when the strong northerly mis-tral wind is blowing, the air pol-lution will be minimized. On days when it is not, there is some suspicion here that the Camargue national wildlife park to the west will be affected.

To help guide development of the region, the government has organized a staff of 40, including architects, urbanists, engineers and economists, at nearby. Vitrolles. As leverage, the group has the funds the state will provide for roads, telephones, sewers and schools. One of the primary aims of this group, according to its as-sistant director, Dominique Becker, is to insure that the architecture of the new buildings will respect the Provencal landscape." # War... and Murder Istanbul, and two policemen are shot in the back in New York City. The one assassination marked the failure of an attempt to blackmail the Turkish government into releasing political prisoners; in the other. two men died in what seemed to bave been a stroke on behalf of "oppressed third world peoples." The slain were tragically irrelovant to the apparent ends; the acts, whatever motives lay behind thom, were murder.

There are those-not too many, probablywho would argue that the ends sought by the murdorers justified the means. There are more, too many more, who believe that the institutionalized violenco represented by tho states the doad men served in their various capacities condones, if it does not actually justify, the killings. After all, this rhotoric runs, the Israel which made Ephraim Elrom its consul-general in Turkey waged war on the Arabs, killing many of thom. And the United States has been fighting in Vietnam for a decade—to say nothing of those who have died as a result of police action in American cities. If killing per se is wrong the conclusion would seem to be those who have killed the greatest number are the most guilty. This kind of thinking does represent one fact of an awakening general consciousness that institutionalized violence is not automatically justified because it is committed by men in uniform, or in places of power, under the old rules of diplomacy or law enforcement. But, as in the case of the uproar over the conviction of Lt. Calley, it ignores

The body of Ephraim Eirom is found in the fact that breaking those rules violently may be even more reprehensible, may lead to greater sins against mankind in general, For both Israel's six-day war and America's intervention in Vietnam were preceded by breaches of the rules, by terrorist acts, just as that most stupid and terrible of wars, the First World War, was triggered by the murder of Archduke Franz Ferdinand and his wife. That the reaction-certainly in this last case—was out of all scale, and was actually the result of many other causes, does not mitigate the guilt nor should it conceal the terrible danger of encouraging small groups or individuals to make their own rules by murder.

> It is one thing to seek to curb institutionalized violence and to avoid war. It is quite another to find excuses for those little wars which can cause big ones, or make overy man with a gun a sovereign judge over his fellows. It may be well to look behind the robe, or the policeman's badge, or the soldier's uniform, and try to shape a society which will see to it that all act responsibly. But, in the meanwhile, it is imperative that the fanatic who acts outside, or against, the institutions men have set up for their own protection should also be held accountable. If war is murder, murdor is war, and if presidents and potentates cannot, in justice, be allowed to shelter themselves behind their offices, neither can the eecret killer be allowed to hide in his anonymity. By that very secrecy, by his irresponsibility, bo is tho moro dangerous, and bears the greater moral burden of guilt.

Solving the Payments Riddle

The dollar crisis has produced a burst of Nixon administration statements designed to prove that neglect, whether benign or malignant, does not represent the official United States balance-of-payments policy,

The White House is now weighing a long list of possible actions to improve American export performance through such measures as imposing strong pressure on other governments to reduce barriers against American goods, providing tax incentives and research and development assistance to exporters, and relaxing the antitrust laws to permit American firms to join forces to meet the challenge of foreign competition, Such specific proposals will have to be judged on their individual merits as they emerge, but there is danger that a new payments policy heavily focused on export promotion will divert attention from other basic causes of the nation's balance-of-payments problem. * * *

The immediate cause of the dollar crisis was a huge flow of short-term capital into Europe; this had been going on for months before speculation-touched off by rumors of German revaluation—became frantic in May. During the first three months of this yoar, before the crisis broke, the United States incurred a record official settlements deficit of $5.5 billion—this translates into an annual deficit rate of $22 billion-chiefly because of shifts of dollars to Europe in response to higher interest rates on the Continent than in the United States. Interest rates here were down because of the business slump and easier monetary policy, while European rates were up as central banks sought to hold money tight to check rising inflation.

Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur Burns has said that interest rates should not be boosted deliberately to deal with the international situation. He believes that the bulk of the short-term capital outflow is over. However, American interest rates are in fact rising-and the prospect is that they will go still higher. There is reason to worry, as White House, Troasury, and Fed are doing, that an excessive riso of both short and long-term rates might cause the present recovery to abort.

But the climb in interest rates will be accelerated rather than slowed if an excessively loose monotary policy regenerates inflation. Chairman Burns has renewed his plea to the White House for a "cogent" incomes policy to check rising wages and prices, but the President still regards this as a worthless proposal. Nor is there evidence that the administration intends to reduce its pressures for a monetary policy stimulative enough to restore full employment before the 1972 election. It is willing to run the risk of rokindling both domestic inflation and another international payments crisis.

* * * The administration appears to have backed away from the notion that foreign governments must go on accepting unlimited dollars to cover United States deficits or upvalue their currencles if they want fewer dollars. Washington underestimated the resistance of foreign business and farm groups that saw thoir interests being burt by currency changes as well as the bitterness of foreign governments over what they regarded as a crisis bred by the United States but foisted upon them.

Yet, in reaction to this lesson, the administration shows signs of trying to solve the balance-of-payments problem by rushing to the opposite extreme of growing desperato about the United States' inadequate trade surplus while neglecting measures to improve the overall payment and monetary adjustment process. Immediately, there is every reason for this country to press for wider bands around existing exchange rate parities, as well as for the rovaluation of currencies that are clearly out of line-especially the undervalned Japanese yen;

The administration needs a balance-ofpayments policy that does not shift from " one extreme-benign neglect-to the opposite extreme of hysterical worry about the nation's trade position. This country still has a moderato surplus of exports over imports. and that surplus increased in the first quarter. America is not being swamped by tidal waves of foreign goods.

The United States will benefit both itself and others if it pushes steadily for liberal trade policies, and showe that it means to practice what it preaches, without making a specific exception of textiles-or, for that matter, of steel, oil, or other products. This country must work closely with others to deal with common problems of economic policy coordination, exchange rates, trade. capital flows, monetary reserves and mutual security, all of which are involved in solving the complex balance-of-payments problem. # Britain and the EEC

In his desperate endeavour to get into the Common Market Mr. Heath is permitting Britain to be used as a diplomatic pawn. The French want us as a counter-weight to Germany in the age-long rivalry between these two states. And for this "privilege" we must contribute hundreds of millions of pounds to maintain French farmers, force our housewives to pay sky-high prices for their food, and abandon our Commonwealth friends ...

Certainly victory has been achieved in Paris. A victory won by French diplomacy over British interests.

The marketeers believe our membership of the community is all over bar the shouting. They are wrong. The people have still to make their voice heard. Inside Parliament. And in the country.

Britain has lost a battle. She has not lost the war.

All Over But the Shooting?

CAIRO.—This month produced in Egypt a series of shoddy Machiavellian plots whose net result has been to strengthen President Anwar Sadat and to confound those opponents who sought to overthrow him. The latter, hoping for the support of a mob, discovered instead that they had only a meek flock. The show began May 2 when Aly Sabry, the unpopular vice-president who pretended to be Moscow's man in Cairo and who coveted the succession to President Nesser, attempted to oust Sadat over the new confederation between Egypt; Libya and Syria. The president sponsored this to bring pressure on Israel, gain the backing of Libya oil money and shore up his flanks against radical Algeria to the west and Iraq to the east. Sadat arrested Sabry easily but was unaware of a secood plot led by Interior Minister Charaoui Gomaa, who detested Sabry but was working as a kind of cobelligerent to get rid of the president. On looking back it is astonishing that Gomaa's effort

An Accident

Gomaa's conspiracy was exposed by accident Tuesday night, May 11. A police major in the bugging department under Gomas. was given wiretap recordings to file away, some in the regular archives and some in secret depositories to which only Gomaa himself had access. One tape was illegibly labeled. The major didn't know how to file it so he played it back on a recorder and was amazed to hear two well-known leaders attacking

He kept an appointment to speak to commanders of the Second Army and rode in a helicopter beside the war minister, Lt. Gen. Mo-hammed Fawzi, a key conspirator. As soon as he got back he dismissed Gomas, secretly appointed the governor of Alexandria to replace him and sent the new minister with three officers to seal off the inuge Interior Department area where buggings were recorded. It was soon confirmed that a coup d'état had been planned for Thursday. May 20, with the seizure of Sadat by agents secreted among his guards.

Gomas was arrested and it was announced on the radio Thursday that be had "resigned." At that instant the other conspirators were meeting in the war minister's office. They realized something had gone wrong when they heard the announcement and decided to resign en masse. assuming Sadat wouldn't fight an accommodation with Israel

After midnight Sadat was visit ed by his close friend, the well-known editor Mohammed Hassanein Helkal, who found the president sitting in his pajamas and dressing gown on his bedroom balcony overlooking the Nile. Sadat remarked simply:

They brought it on themselves."

The affair is now wound up. The conspiracy proved to have many heads but one frail body. The populace has been demonstrating for Sadat ever since and be has emerged as a new strong man. The Russians, apparently not playing factions as Sabry tried to imply, are lying low; relations with the United States have, if anything, improved.

Everything is over but the shooting and, since the chances of peace with Israel have in the long run very possibly improved and since the Egyptians don't like to execute the leaders of even the most treasonable conspiracy, the chances are there won't be any shooting.

In the process he stole the arms control issue from his liberal critics and girded himself against a possible counterattack from the right. He thus put himself in position to come on strong as a prace candidate in 1972.

The big development, of course, was the joint Soviet-American statement on the strategic arms limitations talks. Mr. Nixon had previously insisted that there had to be ao intimate connection between an agreement on defensive weapons, notably the anti-bal-listic missile, and offensive weap-

Glimpses of the Future

Elemental Forces

So underneath all the contentions of local and national politics, which divide men, it would seem there are elemental forces working in the world today that are affecting all peoples and compelling compromise and revision. China is coming out of plation for practical reasons. She does not wish to stand saide while the post-Vietnam world is settled by the other major powers. Similarly, Europe is uniting for practical purposes. Itcannot compete with the new industrial; military and political worlds of Russia and the United States unless it unites and integrates its policies, politics and economies. The American South, similarly, cannot keep pace with the North if it has a separate educational, legal and commercial base. Israel and the Arab states cannot share common lands and waterways without compromise so whatever politicians have said in the past, they are forced to talk and compromise and adjust to the irresistible tides that are forcing nations to fight or

All this clearly is very tentative The rhetoric of the past still dominates politics everywhere, but very definitely, if very slowly, the fear of war and of monetary and economic anarchy is breaking down the old local, regional and even national barriers, and bringing the concept of interdependence into the politics of the world. The reconciliation of Britain and France is only the latest illustration of the point. In the first days after the last World War, even General de Gaulle understood the unifying forces operating in the world.

The chellenge that faced the country in 1860 is no different today. Indian South Alricans ere the most highly developed of the non-white groups. Their contribution to the growing national economy, both as ekilled end unskilled fabour, is fast gaining recognition. There is increasing sympathy among influential moderete leeders towards all groups, which cannot but eventuate in further goodwill end harmonious reletions for e stronger South Africa.

Dr. Albert J. J. Wessels

It would be naive for en industrialist like myself to be unconscious of the serious economic implications of the racial and political problems of the Republic of South Africa. It would be more than naive il I continue nor only to live here, but also persist to invest every cent I earned and saved here. Yet, that is what I am doing and at the age of 62 years I am not naive do it because it is obvious to me Iliat South Africa's industrial revolution has just commenced. In fact it only started seriously after the end of the second world war. During this period a signilicant socio-industriel development began: it is the training of the Bantu as a semi-skilled and skilled factory operator. The South African industrialist has at last succeeded to train factory managers and foremen who are socialogically and psychologically equipped to train and utilise to a fuller extent the Bantu worker.

The result of this training programme was in many respects spectacular. For sustained economic growth the availability of labour is of great importance. Productive Bantu labour with its higher wages and greater spending power is a sound loundation for further growth, and herein lies my confidence of the economic future of this country.

South Africa's economy has advenced to the stage where its future growth depends on secondary industrial ectivity. Continued industrialisation will be the charactaristic of the future course of events. The industrial sector contributes 28.0% to G.D.P. In thirty years time it is projected to be 36.0%, which will give tha South African economy a structure comparable to that of the industrially advanced countries of today. By the turn of the century the per capita G.D.P. is expected to be the same or higher than the present levels achieved in the majority of Western European countries.

There is little doubt as to our potential to achieve this. In the last decade South Africa's real growth rate of 6.0% per annum was second only to those of Japan and Western Germany. The factots responsible, i.e. savings, investment, natural resources, law and order and first class entrepreneurs, will continue to support a high rete of growth, Sufficient earnings in foreign exchange will depend on our ability to achieve and maintein a rata of increase in the exports of manufactured products in excess of our past performance. This means enhanced international trade, in perticular with the industrially advanced countries.

Transportation of people and goods has been the lifeblood of the Rennie Organisation since it was founded in 1849. We have grown rapidly with the development of South Africa and particularly so in the last five years, when profits before tax have insteased from R300,000 to R3,000,000, earnings per share from 8 cents to 231, and assets from R6 million to R33.5 million.

The extent of the highly sophisticated services which the Group has to offer ranges from parcel delivery to 150 ton loads by road, from the complete transportation arrangements for oil refineries to air freight and air charter, from stevedoring bulk cargoes to luxury touring arrangements end from ship-owning to shooting safaris. Rennies is the major nama in transportation now in Southern Africa, and with the container revolution on our threshold, we ere gaering ourselves to take a leading part in transportation in the future.

Wa believe firmly in the stability of South Africa and the part which sha must surely play in the future strategic plans and trade patterns of the West and East, standing as she does at the crossroads of both worlds.

In the South African language of warm. hospitality, this means 'everything of the best'. It's also a friendly salutation.

But on South African Airways it means both. So when one of our hostesses smiles at you, you see a little bit of sunshine.

And when she's helping you to a rock lobster tail or rich Cape liqueur, it really is everything of the best.

In every way it makes very good sense to fly SAA. The Boeings we fly are right up to the minute. In fact, SAA will be the first international airline to operate the new 747Bs later this year. What's more our new SAAFARI

As we celebrate the 10th enniversary of the Republic of South Africa, the Indian community looks back on a record of substantial progress which commenced with the acceptance of the South African Indians es a permanent part of the South African population in 1961. Hitherto the policy of successive Governments was the repatriation of the Indian population to India.

In the climate which then prevailed Indien progress in the educational, social end economic fields was to a very large axtent regulated by the Indian community's own ability to contribute financially towards their progress.

With the creation of the Department of Indien Affairs in 1961 a plenned programme for the aconomic and social upliftment of the community was put into operation by the Government. Spectacular progress has been made in the field of education and every Indian child is now assured of primary, high school and university education. Technical education is now being imparted to enable Indiens to acquire skills which will offer more interesting and well paid positions. The Indian community is now actively engaged in the creation of financial institutions which will mobilisa resources for increased economic

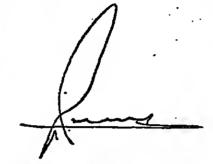

The starting of The New Republic Bank Ltd. is a major step in this direction. This offers a challange and a great opportunity for the Indians to obtain a sizeable share of the industrial growth in Natal, because of tha Province's suitability for such industries. This province is expected to forge ahead in industrial growth because of its location in close proximity to the large port of Durban coupled with the availability of both labour and raw materials. The availability of water resources is another factor which is causing planners to direct future industrial expansion to

Good design bridges ell international differences and markets. Southern Africa has proved fertile for the growth of design in its broadest sense. Here we can both call on Unimark's international pool of knowledge and talent and by the same channels help South African companies to expand into world markets. Unimark in South Africa is en extension of American business thinking. Our experience in the South African market places us in a uniqua position to advise and guide American companies on product devalopment, graphic communication and marketing. The scope of opportunity in South Africa is unlimited. We believe true design is a most effective marketing sid when tailored to suit specific market requirements. Bilingualism, for example, demends special consideration in South Africa and often affects such items as packaging, design, and shareholder materials.

N.Y. Stocks Undergo 'Correction', But Optimism On Long-Term Prospects Prevails on Wall St.

By Thomas E. Mullanay NEW YORK, May 23 INYTI. -With the approaching first anniversary of the deepest declino in the stock market's bearish plunge of last year, investors been reminded rather cogently this month that the market has entered a potentially vulnerable area. Security analysts have been anticipating for some time a normal and "healthy" correction in stock prices after their fantastic run-up since last November and the earlier spurt from the nadir of May 26, 1970, when a 7 1'2year low was touched in the leading market yardsticks.

The correction has finally come this month, with the downward moro accentuated in last Monday's sharp decline. A conjunction of several odverse news developments ignited the expected flash of profit taking that produced the market's steepest oneday drop in 11 months.

In the background at the start of the week were widespread speculation that interest rates, especially the prime lending rate of the commercial banks, were headed upward and concern over the start of a strike by railroad signalmen that disrupted railroad service throughout the country. There was also lingering worry over the recent international monetary crisis and confirmation of the deteriorating U.S. balanceof-payments position.

Housing Starts

There was little olse in the week's economic or political developments that gave any real impetus for the market in either direction. The Commerce Department disclosed that housing starts, which had been rising sharply this year, turned down

2.4 percent in April However, down the market at this time. starts were 55 percent above last year's level and the outlook was still encouraging. Consumer prices continued to advance moderately in April, according to anothor govornment report, while new orders for durable goods declined 2 percent last month to a seasonally adjusted $21.12 billion.

The stock market's downturn last week was brief and limited, an long-term optimism still prevails on Wall Street. The current consolidating phase, security analysis say, may carry further -perhaps to the 880 area in the Dow index—but prospects for new historic highs this year are still considered bright.

Even though technical indi-cators, such as declining short interest and the low cash positions of the mutual funds, may weigh experts say that the fundamental factors are still bullish. These include the gradual recovery of business from the 1969-1970 recession, the new housing boom now under way, the low level of speculative interest in the markel, and the continuing windingdown of the Vietnam war.

Meanwhile the trend toward higher interest rates and lower prices for fixed-income securities was a small recovery in bond prices in the latter part of the

Although not on the agenda as such, this topic will be prominent in discussions throughout the week at the 18th annual International Banking Conference, attended by Treasury Secretary John B. Connally, Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur F. Burns and other policy-making central bankers and finance ministers of the Western world.

One highly placed international official noted that the American people have been "educated" to believe that it is technically imcause it is at the center of the international monetary system, and that the exchange rate of the dollar can be altered only by changing the price of gold, now changing the price of gold, now officially pegged at $35 an ounce.

"There is really no economic or technical reason not to devalue the dollar," he told this correspondent a few day ago, "only political." But he acknowledged that "it can't be done before the [1972 presidential] election, and perhaps not even after."

This official would simply "ent

This official would simply "cut the link" between dollar and gold, in effect allowing the dollar to float. Presumably, its value in foreign exchange markets would drop some say by about 10 percentand the value of gold would thus be that much higher. This would been rising at a very strong pace. "Outside autos and steel," the government official said, "inventories were being liquidated. This means that production schedules will have to be stepped up even-

It is now clear that the latest recession has definitely passed. and, while it was more severe than anticipated, it was, overall, milder than any of the four previous economic contractions of the post-World War II period.

Despite the fact that the recession is definitely over and a new expansion has begun, voices are rising in favor of fresh stimulus for the economy to help reduce the intolerably high level of un-employment. Others, though, are recommending strongly against any change in policy at this time. And some sources are calling for tighter monetary policies to help the United States's seriously adverse balance-of-payments prob-

Fiscal Policy Objective

Admittedly, the balance-of-payments situation is in bad disarray, with a deficit of more than $10 billion last year, a further deficit of $5.5 billion in the first quarter of 1971 and an additional deficit of approximately $7 billion in the first six weeks of the sec-ond quarter, according to an estimate by the Morgan Guaranty

Apparently, though, government olicy will continue to resist any effort to raise interest rates to help the payments situation. Dr.

Burns indicated as much last week, and other high U.S. offi-cials have said that the primary objective of monetary and fiscal policy will continue to be directed toward strengthening the domestic economy. The big decline in stock prices on Monday was mirrored in weekly losses for the market averages. The Dow Jones industrials finished at 921.87, down 14.19 points: Standard and Poor's dropped 1.31 to 111.71 and the New York Stock Exchange composite index fell 0.76 to 55.59. One bright spot was the low level of trading. Turnover on the Big Board fell to 70.79 million shares, or the slowest pace since 70.13 million shares changed hands in the opening week of

There were 476 advances and 1215 declines for the week, with 144 stocks closing without change. CNA Financial, the week's most active stock on a turnover of 915,500 shares, rose 1 1/3 points to 23 1.6 after posting a yearly high at 23 3.4. A huge block of 898,800 shares at 23 1.2 traded on Thursday.

CNA is a holding company with diversified interests that include insurance, consumer credit, mutual funds, real estate, health services and leasing.

Dentsply International plunged 11 3/4 points to 42 3/4 in profit taking. The stock ran up sharply in recent trading, thanks to the company's new system for the protection of teeth from decay. Volume was 745,600 shares. In the previous week, Dentsply rocketed 22 3 4 points to a record price.

BIRDS OF AMERICA

dition of society." Thack-eray once remarked, "not to be sometimes a snob." And things have surely gotten worse-in this respect no less than in others—since Thackeray observed the Technology, mass production, mass culture, increased suffrage, the whole drift toward a mechanical and spiritual homogenization—the very dynamics of modern society conspire to deatroy the authority of the old standards in everything from styles of cookery to the morals of warfare. Memories of the way things used to be grow dim-mer but ever more precious. Even nostalgia becomes a packaged commodity, to be sold by the gross on the mass market.

Thus, in each succeeding generation the defense of taste comes more and more to resemble a form of social martyrdom—an act of ill-fated necessity. And the snob, heretofore a figure of fun, an agent of folly and indul-gence pitifully out of touch with the realities of experience, may suddenly emerge as a moral hero of sorts, holding the line against the barbarian hordes.

What a profound, hilarious novel might be written on this subject! A traditionally comic stance—at once foolish and vuinerable-transmuted, through the painful vicissitudes of history, into a heroic, perhaps even a tragic posture. The fool revealed as the wise man; snobbery redeemed as a spiritual vocation. Is this the povel that Mary McCarthy set out to write in "Birds of America?" For pages upon pages of this book, the unwary reader—his mind bemus-ed by Miss McCarthy's reputation as a satirist, wit, and social critic—might have every reason to suppose so. Surely, one thinks, there must be some higher literary purpose at work in these solemn litanies of taste rising in repeated, interminable crescendos. For the virtues of old-fashioned cookery, gardening, needlework, and domestic craftsmanship of every kind are not merely extolled in this novel, they are gar-landed with lists, inventories, whole catalogues of items from some ideal larder, some utopian potting shed, and a composite. fantasy of all the small-town hardware stores, fish markets, and vegetable stands that once adorned the economy of American life. Whole sections of "Birds of America" read like a valentine to Fanny Farmer.

There are, to be sire, some characters in this novel, though they are distinctly less impor-tant—less real—to the author than are things. The hero, Peter Levi, is a young prig who, despite the divorce of his parents, has been carefully nurtured on the highest moral, intellectual, polititural, and ecological standards. The heroine, Rosamund Brown, is his absurd mother, an overcultivated cipher who is not only a well-known virtuoso at the harpsichord but also an absolute whiz at every sort of cooking, baking, and canning, at sewing and gardening and the recognition of every species of flore and fauna, and-well, who could pos-ably keep track of a complete list

BOXING—At Madrid, Spain's Pedro Carrasco took the, European junior welterweight crown from Bené Roque of France with a manimum decision over 15 rounds. There were no knockdowns, but after the fifth round blood flowed from the Frenchman's right eyebrow, mouth and nose. Roque landed a left jab above Carrasco's right eye in the eighth round that drew a trickle of blood. The three judges scored it, 67-73, 65-73, and 63-73 in favor of the former European lightweight champion. Carrasco met Roque nose before, outpointing him in an eight-round bout in 1965.

In another boat, Tahar Ben Hassen of Tunists knocked out European featherweight champion Jose Legra, of Spain in the fourth round of their schedolied-ten-round non-title fight. A right uppercut in the chin floored Legra in the first minute of the fourth round. He staggered to his feet at the count of eight, but the referen halted the fight.

In another preliminary, Jose Duran of Spain outpointed France's Jean Josechin in an eight-round weiterweight bout.

could be made ready in time for Monte Carlo. At a Formula One race two weeks ago in Silverstone, England, Stewart was going 100 miles an hour when he braked and ended up going into an embankment completely demolishing the body of his favorite car. Another Tyrrell was made available to him. It wasn't needed.

For ten days, two shifts of four mechanics worked a total of 18 to 19 hours a day and the car was ready Wednesday, a day before the Monte trials, in which Stewart had the best time. Stewart's time was the best in the Monaco race's history, as he drove the 60-lap course in 1 hour 52 minutes 21.3 seconds for an average speed of 134.859 kilo-

After Stewart's quickly taking the lead. Jo Siffert of Switzer-land in a BRM, Jacky Ickx of Belgium in a Ferrari and Peterson joined the pursuit.

Eight-Second Lead By the 20th lap, Stewart 1:1 Siffert by eight seconds and by the 30th the lead was more than 15 seconds and only mechanical trouble could have stopped Stewart from winning. It was time to take it easy. But Stewart doesn't know how to go slow, started setting lap records and, on the 57th goaround, he did 1:22.2. Stewart didn't want to take any chances of slowing up and thus acting unnaturally because he has had, each time he has raced here, the lead at one point. Today, though, was only his second Monte Carlo victory. Ha won in 1966.

The victory gave Stewart 24 points in the drivers' standing. where he will be as hard to eatch as he was teday. Ickx, who fin-ished third today, is second with ten points and Mario Andretti, who failed to qualify here, is third with nine from his victory in South Africa. Stewart won at Barcelona, and even with today's race being a breeze, he still said 'I drove better at Barcelona."

One of the competitors who might have given him a chase was Graham Hill, five-time winner here. But Hill had to abandon the race when he crashed on the second lap as the wheel of his Brabham-Ford touched a barrier and sent his car skidding scross the track. Hill was unburt.

Andretti Is a Washout At Monte Carlo Trials

MONTE CARLO, May 23 (IHT) .- The Ferrari mechanics couldn't do anything with their machine and Mario Andretti couldn't fix the weather and the combination kept America's premier driver waiting at least another year for his first winding drive through Monte Carlo in the Grand Prix of Monaco.

"It was the first time I've failed to qualify anywhere," said Andretti, after everyone ganged up on him and prevented him from getting into today's race.

"I've waited a long time to come here. I think I could get to like this place. But I can't lay down and cry now." The tears would only remind him of yesterday's rain which made the course slow and caused the Ferrari mechanics to equip their car with heavy-treaded rain tires.

When the rain finally stopped, with 1 1/2 hours of trial time remaining, Andretti was helpless because his regular car, which received a new engine the previous evening, was not in racing condition because of a bent 15-cent bearing.

Andretti was then given the reserve Ferrari, of Belgium's Jacky Ickx, but that was worthless because he could hardly see over a screen in front of the car and then the car developed ring gear and pinion trouble and the former Indianapolis 500 winner was Andretti finally wound up with the 20th best qualifying time Jackie Stewart led with 1 minute 232 seconds—but only the top 16 qualified. This was the first time all drivers had to qualify for this race. Andretti's wife said before the rains came that all the Ferrari with the new engine would have to do "is start and Mario will qualify." The engine did start, but so did the rain.

OAKLAND, May 23.-Jim (Catfish) Hunter fired a two-hitter for his cighth consecutive victory as the Oakland Athletics, with Tommy Davis batting in three runs, trimmed the Minnesota Twins yesterday, 5-1.

Hunter, who lost his first two starts this season but has not been beaten since April 11, limited the Twins to a fifth-inning home run by rookie Steve Braun and a two-out single by Cesar Tovar in the ninth.

They were the only batters to reach base against the 25-year-old righthander, who pitched a perfect game against the Twins in 1969.

Saturday

Davis, playing first in place of Mike Epstein because the Twins started lefthander Jim Kaat, drove in two of his runs in the first with a single and added his first home run of the year in the seventh after Reggie Jackson hit his seventh, a 450-foot smash to center.

Death of a Salesthing

By Russell Baker

WASHINGTON. — Unseen apparently by office boys, receptionists, secretaries, building guards, in short, by the whole apparatus meant to shelter us from humanity, he had slipped into the office and had his sample cases open on the floor in a flash, "The latest machine..." he began. He extracted B box which look ed metallic but was actually made of a chemical compound, the pame of which ended in -cene. Perhaps It was epicenc. No, it was epistocene.

miracle epistocene Baker casing." he explained. His voice was a recorded announcement. It was badly worn. and it immediately began repeating, 'miracle epistocene casing, miracle epistocene casing, miracle epistocene casing." A hard slap on the back got it going again. "Goes with you anyplace," his voice insisted. "To office, beach or that hig business trip you've been plunning."

"Go sway. I have no time for machines today." "Simply place it on the lap. press the energizer button, deflect the activator, throw the solenoid intake retractor outlet switch

"Will you. please and for the last time, get out of here before I pour water in your hop hinges?" ... and," he continued, soul-lessly. "It will disintegrate anybody you want disintegrated."

The foot that was poised to kick him or it put of the office stayed from the swift execution of its owner's intent upon hearing these last words, which the salesman, or salesthing, began repeating from its worn groone. ... Anybody you want disintegrated, anybody you went disin-tegrated, anybody you want..." Another slep on the heck moved him into a fresh groove. He said he was now prepared to answer certain questions which market surveys showed, potential

"Did you say that this box will disintegrate anybody I want disintegrated?" "I did indeed."

Does it hurt?"

"Such questions need not arise for the locky owner of the Little Winder Automatic Remote Miracle Human Disintegrating Machine," the recorded pitch replied. "Because it works at distances : more than five miles from the person to be disintegrated, or the 'eliminee,' as we refer to this unfortunate individual, the user of the machine need never know whether the disintegration has caused the eliminee the slightest degree of discomfort."

"I can't stand the sight ofyou know—people suffering. Limbs slowly vanishing in the disintegration process—ugh! You'd have to be inhuman to be able to take that ... no offense intended, of course

"We are sware, we are sware, we are aware, we are ... " A punch in the back. "... sware that DD civilized man could bring himself to disintegrate an eliminee at close range. This is why we make it possible to complete the entire disintegration from such great distances."

What could a man do? People all over town would be buying them. Soon they would be selling like whisky and pills.

"You will find that it is more effective than the telephone, less clumsy than the automobile and much cheaper to operate than the B-52, the B-52, the B-52, the B-52," the salesman said and said and said. The punch on the back didn't work this time. He became slient and B shoulder fell off and struck the floor with a clang. He peeded servicing badly, but all the shops were filled for weeks, and anyway, it would be cheaper for whoever operated him to scrap him and buy a new one. At least, that's what they slways say. In short, he went in the trash.

The box is still here on the desk. It might be interesting just to see if it really works. Let's see now, who could be disintegrated without much loss to the world? Just to test the thing, you understand ... we won't have huyers were most likely to ask, to see the actual vanishing ...

Miss Pennsylvania Becomes Miss U.S.A.

MIAMI BEACH, March 23 IAPI.—Michele Mc-Donald was crowned Miss U.S.A. last night. An 18-year-old high school senior from Butler. Pa. Miss McDonald accepted the crown from last vear's winner, Debbie Shelton, who represented Virginia. After the traditional runway walk, the winner's father. Claude McDonald, hugged her and said, "Damn, you're beautiful."

Miss McDonald said she entered the pageant for the enjoyment of meeting people "and the challenge it offered me." On her contest entry form she said the man

she most admired in the world today was her father; but when asked who she would choose to have a conversation with if she could talk to anyone in the world, she said she would like to talk with President Nixon,

Miss McDonald measures 35-24-35 and has brown eyes. She weighs 126 pounds and chose a modified haseball outfit that showed off her legs when she marched in the Parade of States. First runnerup was Brenda Box of Texas, a 20year-old drama student at the University of Texas at Austin.
